

the Bank as sufficient for what was not loaned, and that too after it was repaid. Because the 3d ground is not admitted to be true, that only so much was to be raised as might be required to re-build the City of Charleston—after and further objects were in view, to wit: to increase the capital of the Bank, and so it is stated, else as the fire loans are paid in, the Bonds should be taken up; whereas the fire loan is for ten years, and the bonds run twenty or thirty years, leaving the Bank ten and twenty years.

Because, the statement of the security is made for effect, and gives no information not possessed by the Legislature, who directed the money to become part of the Bank, and of course secured as other capital.

Because, the 5th ground is a mere abstract proposition, not disputed by any one, and quite idle at this time, when the State has already borrowed money to lend out, and has created a Bank and mortgaged it to pay her borrowed money. Besides, in truth, it is much more justifiable to borrow money on the general credit, and commit it to a Bank to loan out successively in small sums, to relieve the planters and mechanics of the State, than to subscribe as the State has done $200,000 to a Rail Road Bank; $800,000 to pay in advance Rail Road Shares, and then plight the same public faith for two millions more, all to one company of individuals, and this all by the advice, persuasion and co-operation of those who induce homilies about loaning money to bank upon.

Because, the 6th ground is equally useless except to mislead. Every body knows that where the public faith is pledged, each citizen in proportion to his wealth is pledged, and it is a pity that was not thought of when the State involved itself three millions to "the favoured few" who were embarked in the great Ohio and Kentucky failure. But the loans by the Bank are secured by good names, good mortgages, and the ultimate security of the State, after all the Bank capital sunk, is so remote as to be of little value, except for an ad captandum argument.

Because, the 7th ground is equally a mere truism, except the insinuation as to the "new policy now proposed of raising money for the Bank by increasing the public debt," which has no warrant in fact. The policy is not new, neither is any such operation proposed. The act was done in 1838, and well or unwell, was a part of the fire loan Act, and the money so raised is mortgaged and cannot be withdrawn without a breach of public faith.

Because, the 8th ground is a mere general principle which might have been well urged in 1812, when the Bank was created, but is wholly unavailing in 1841 when contracts have been made and the public faith is to be kept.

Because, the 8th ground is also unfairly stated. The last four years of outlook for calamity afford no fair criterion to judge the operations of the Bank; and no new proposal is now made to borrow at 6 per cent, and bank at 5 1/2 per cent; but, on the contrary, in a series of years the Bank has made more than 7 per cent; and will redeem the whole stock and actually pays the interest for the State, and although it be true that the increase of other Banks has diminished the profits of the Bank of the State, yet the statement that the present state of that Bank "cannot fail to result in loss and must eventually be made good by taxing the people" is the merest scare-crow that could be set up. There is no reason for believing that the Bank will fail, not only to pay the interest, but redeem the principal of all the debt and have her capital left, and but for the improvident Rail Road speculation she could now pay the public debt years before it is due. The majority therefore deemed the protest irregular, the grounds frivolous and deceptive, and calculated to injure the interest of the borrowers under the fire loan by denying to the rest of the State any of the fac- ties which had been so freely granted to Charleston. That it was calculated to injure the credit of the State, as these Bonds were pledged with the rest of the cap- ital for specific debts outstanding.

That at this time was peculiarly im- proper to do any thing to diminish the re- sources of the Bank of the State, as it would lay it at the mercy of the rival Banks, destroy public confidence in its circulation and imperil its business; and then, indeed the citizens must be taxed to make up the loss. That no call was made by the people—no suggestion from the Executive, and although no doubt the movement proceeded from pure pa- triotism; still it was ill-timed. And when the storm is over and the money market calm and settled, a reduction of Bank capital by all the Banks would be a very reasonable proposition—and the Bank of the State would come down with the rest. The dividends of the Bank of the State in- stead of being expended by the Stock- holders is placed in the sinking fund and thus it is that the public debt is paid off. The whole affair was small, a feather—to see if the Legislature was prepared at this time to disturb the Bank and after electing proper directors to permit every mem- ber of the Legislature to administer his nostrum. The Bank was established, its capital mortgaged, its debtors like all others, suffering under the curtailment of the circulation. It was no time to try ex- periments. The names who rejected the protest were forty nine.

Palmer, Phillips, Rhett, Richards, Riley, Robinson, Roper, Sims, Singleton, G. H. Smith, J. Smith, Speers, Tridwell, Trotti, Wade, Washington.

Cheap Living.—The farmers of Illinois, it is stated, are obliged to take a cent and a half a pound for their pork, or they could not raise money to pay their taxes—and very good turkeys may now be bought to Cincinnati for twenty-five cents a head—and good chickens for a dollar a dozen, as poor as the money is.

Rail Road Convention.—U. S. Mails. &c.—It will be recollected by our reader, that the Post Master General, in his last report made, suggested the necessity of government making some arrangement with the various rail road and steamboat lines, which would secure the permanent transportation of the mails in time of peace, and in case of war the conveyance of troops, material &c., and that the Secretary of War entertained similar views. For the purpose of digesting this subject, and ob- taining the opinions of those interested an invitation was extended to the several corporations throughout the Union, to meet in Convention at Washington, which was very generally accepted, and the conven- tion was organized in that city on Satur- day last, by the selection of Dr. Sheppard, of Virginia, as President, and Gen. Pat- terson, of North Carolina, as Secretary. Nearly forty different rail roads were re- presented, either by their presidents or dele- gates.

After organization, the Post Master General was informed that the convention were prepared to go to business, when a communication was presented from that officer, entering into details, explanatory of his views of what measures should be adopted to accomplish the desired object. Full discussion followed, eliciting the opin- ions of the members of the convention, & we are happy to say that a general, in- deed unanimous desire on their part, was expressed to meet the views of the gov- ernment. The convention appointed a Committee of six, viz: Louis McLane, of Maryland; Dr. Sheppard, of Virginia; Gov. Dudley, of N. C.; John P. King, of Georgia; Mr. Rockwell of Conn., and Mr. Bliss, of Mass., to confer with the Post Master General, and fix on the basis of a bill to be proposed to Congress, by which the government can secure the permanent use of the rail roads throughout the Union, for the transportation of the mails, and also troops, munitions of war, &c.—Char-leston.

Effect of the United States Bankrupt Law on Leases.—It is important for the safety of the lessors, that leases hereafter made should make provision for the bank- ruptcy of the lessee, as on such an event his state and interest in the premises will pass to his assignees, if they choose to ac- cept it, and not otherwise; if they do ac- cept it, they may transfer it to whom they please—even to a beggar, and the assignee will not remain responsible for rent after such transfer.

It is insufficient and immaterial that the original law contains a special clause, avoiding the lease if the lessee should un- derlet, &c., because such a clause applies only to voluntary transfers by the lessee, and not to assignments by the act of law. Such a clause will not prevent the interest of the lessee from passing to his assignees, in bankruptcy, nor restrict them in the disposal of it.

HAMBURG, Jan. 12.
Our Cotton market fairly opened, al- though there is not a great quantity ar- riving, as the roads are in a bad condition. Prices range from 6 to 7 1/2 cts: prime lots, however, will bring 8 to 8 1/2 cts. Some sales of very inferior parcels have been made as low as 3 to 4 cts. These were very poor samples, and perhaps not sold on their own merit, and therefore should not be included in our quotations. The market is steady, and sales readily made at prices above stated.

Dry Goods, Groceries, &c.—As the planters have not commenced their regu- lar trips, and a general business cannot be laid down, we leave off our remarks and the correction of our Prices Current until next week.
